Indent if you're writing fiction or nonfiction. If you're writing poetry or a song, you don't need to indent unless you're going for a specific effect. Notice this is double-spaced so it's easier to read. Double-spacing also allows editors to write you notes when you start publishing your stories or books.

Remember that your submission should recognize women's and girls' stories and their contribution to the history, culture, and growth of the American West, west of the Mississippi River. Your entry may be about any period of history or may be current day.
